AN IMPROVED COMPOSING MACHINE. A working model of a composing machine, onstructed for use in newspaper and book work, was exhibited yesterday at the office of the inventor, No. 444 Broome-st. The great feature of the invention is Broeme-st. The great reature of the invention is a me-chanical device by which ordinary type-setting and type-distributing are dispensed with, and 100 types are made to perform the service of a full font set in the usual way. The letters of the alphabet, together with figures, pune-tastion marks, and combination words are arranged in regular order in a type-head two inches square, and are operated upon by keys, manipulated as in a plane. When the keys are touched the type-head moves to its position, and action is had upon whatever letter or figure is touched, the type moving downward a prescribed dis-tance, and making a printed impression on transfer paper. The platen, on which the paper is laid, is noved backward and forward by a feed-wheel for each impression of the type, and the spaces between the Commissioner Winslow, yesterday, on a charge of having appropriated has belonging to the Government, while Superintendent of the engineer works at Fort Hamilton.

At a meeting of the Brooklyn anti-Dramshop party last evening, C. C. Williams was elected Prosident, L. S. Crandall, Secretary, and C. C. Leigh, and L. S. Cran

2,600 impressions per hour. In place of transfer paper a mode of clay or wax may be used to receive indentations, from which a stereotype cast can be obtained, of uniform thickness and ready for the press. The machine is driven with a treadle like a sewing-machine, and occupies about the same space. It can be manufactured for $20, and the type-heads for $3 each.

Every style of type, borders, ornamentation, and also music, can be produced, only requiring one type to represent each character. The type-heads are easily changed, and as many as 50 styles can be employed by the compositor, without rising from his seat. As criginally patented the types were arranged on the periphery of a disc or wheel, and the impressions made upon prepared pulp or clay, were justified with difficulty. By the improved machine impressions are made upon paper and justification and correction are accomplished without loss of time.
